For example, a police officer makes an arrest, using excessive force, and permanently injures a suspect in violation of police ordinance and relevant jurisdictional laws. Should the officer be held criminally or civilly liable? Explain.

- Criminally
- Civilly
- Both

- No, police officers should not be liable for their actions in the line of duty.

14. Which of the following reforms would you vote for as a legislator? Check the left box if you support or the right box if you oppose:

- Ban No Knock Warrants - Ban the practice of unannounced raids on private property, which violate due process law and put lives at risk.
- Police Demilitarization - Establish limits on military equipment transferred to police, i.e. a town of 2,000 people receiving a tactical assault vehicle.
- Body Cameras - Mandate police wear body cameras to ensure accountability.
- Repeal Mandatory Minimums - Repeal mandatory minimums for non-violent offenses and allow local judges to take external factors into account.
- Expungement - Erase arrest records of those found not guilty or who have a case against them dismissed. Simple drug possession charges should be expunged so a criminal record doesn't keep a person from education, employment, or housing.
- Restore Felon Gun Rights - Allow non-violent felons to regain their 2nd Amendment rights after serving their sentence.

- End Government Use of Facial Recognition - Ban the government use of facial recognition technology which presents an inherent threat to our privacy, free expression, information security, and essential civil liberties.
- Never Again! - Never again should the government shut down our economy, compel vaccination, or institute mask mandates.
